Maori Girl

An unusual story of a romance between a Maori girl and an American boy Monday and Tuesday on Trans-Canada Matinee

When Bill Tribble first met her, Henaury Strongman was a slender, attractive Maori girl living in Whangaruru South, a small seaside resort in New Zealand's northland. He was a big, husky American on a visit "down under," and mutual friends were anxious that they meet. But Hinauri pictured him as a cocktail-drinking, fast-talking smoothie, and said she wasn't interested. Eventually, of course, curiosity wore her resistance down, and they were introduced. Their romance, and the unusual story of the Iranian boy who helped to bind their lives together, will be related on Trans-Canada Matinee on Monday and Tuesday by Hinauri herself, on CBC radio. This is a delightful tale, told in a warm charming style, with bright touches of humour.

To set the scene Hinauri has provided a short background picture. From her home in Bountiful, Utah, she writes: "My Bill was born in Milford, a small town in southern Utah. He attended Westminster Junior College in Salt Lake City. It was his ambition to become a school teacher, so he majored in English and social sciences and received his B.Sc. degree in education from Miami University in Oxford, Ohio. Shortly after his graduation he was called into the armed services with the U.S. Transportation Corps and stationed in a lonely desert outpost in Iran, where his battalion was operating the Trans-Iranian Railroad from the port of Khorramshahr on the Persian Gulf to the northern ports on the Caspian Sea. The extreme desert conditions were almost intolerable, for the men were barbecued by day and went into a deep freeze at night. The daily monotony of life was broken only by waging a battle royal against the sandflies which nearly drove the men beyond sanity. At this point Bill felt a desperate need for some outside activity to prevent the disintegration of his spirit. He began to observe the Persian boys who frequented the camp looking for work, food and other items of salvage, and singled out a fine-looking lad of 14 with intelligent features and a keen alert manner. Something about him appealed strongly to Bill, and it wasn't long before he and Reza were buddies. The G. I.'s nicknamed him Ronnie, and he became the camp mascot and Bill's devoted shadow. Here at last was something Bill could live for in all the wilderness and heat. Life took on new meaning for him, and his inborn love for people, irrespective of race, colour or creed, and his compassion for the underprivileged gathered new momentum through Ronnie. That is one of the countless reasons I fell in love with Bill when I met him many years later in 1950, on his return trip to New Zealand. That is why all who have met him in my country and in Ronny's love him, too. To those who don't know him he is just an

New BBC Head On "First Person"

H. Carleton Greene, the first man from within the ranks of the BBC to be named director-general of the corporation, will be heard on CBC radio, August 30.

Greene's appointment takes effect next year. He succeeds Sir Ian Jacob, who will retire.

Freelance broadcaster John Lerch interviewed Greene in London. Their talk will be heard on First Person, on the Trans-Canada network.

Formerly head of the BBC's news and current affairs department, Greene has become known as an outspoken champion of complete freedom from commercial and political interference in broadcasting. He spoke recently to a group of German business men on the topic: "Two threats to Broadcasting: Commercial and Political Interference." Text of the address was widely published.

The Journals and Letters of Napoleon

H. G. Wells saw him as a "dark little archaic personage, hard, compact, capable, unscrupulous, imitative, and neatly vulgar." He was certainly unimposing, but in that thin, yellow-faced and often badly-dressed person glowed a fire that made him the master of kings and peasants from Spain to the borders of Russia, and changed the face of Europe in the space of only 15 years. Historians and romanticists have long squabbled over his claim to genius and place among history's greats. Napoleon himself was never in any doubt, though even he was amazed at the swiftness of his rise to fame. From St. Helena he wrote: "Centuries will pass before the unique combination of events which led to my career occur in the case of another . . . If I had succeeded, I would have been the greatest man the world has known." But deity though he may have been in his own eyes, his ultimate fate was determined by a power stronger than his. As Victor Hugo put it: "God was bored by him."

Success was as necessary to Napoleon as bread, but not because of a humble origin. His father, a lawyer who raised a large family in trying times, came of a good family established on the island of Corsica in the 16th century. His mother was very beautiful and of strong character. The island had just become French, and the Bonapartes accepted their new nationality reluctantly at first, later with complete loyalty. Young Napoleon began his French education with none of his fellow Frenchmen's traditions or prejudices, with more or less an open mind. He had a solid education (showed a strong aptitude for science) ending at the Ecole Militaire in Paris. Even after his commissioning he studied hard, gradually building up a reputation for cool objectivity coupled with ardent enthusiasm. "The whole art of war," he said, "consists of a careful and well-thought-out defensive together with a swift and bold offensive." He soon had ample opportunity for putting thought into action. Simplicity and rapidity were the keynotes of his campaigns and battles.

Occasionally he returned from anticipated victories with no more than the itch, but gradually his military method began to pay off . . . for it was a method, rather than a system, that stretched the borders of his empire. He studied the psychology of his opponent to the most minute detail. He delegated as little authority as possible, saw to every detail himself. Anatole France wrote: "A galley slave has a happier life than Napoleon. He worked everywhere and always, at table, at the theatre, in his carriage, in his bath. He hardly slept three hours at night. He wore everyone out. He was not a man, but a machine." Aptly, he chose the bee as his symbol. He filed his ideas in neat little mental rows. "When I wish to interrupt an affair," he wrote (and in this case the affair was political rather than amorous) "I close the drawer which contains it, and open that which contains another. They do not mix together and do not fatigue me, nor inconvenience me. If I wish to sleep, I shut up drawers and I am asleep."

Eventually, of course, his "method" included marriage and a son to inherit his empire. He chose Josephine, a beautiful Creole widow of Viscount de Beauharnais, who was guillotined during the Terror. She was six years older than Napoleon, and no better than she had to be. When she married him she was down to her last sou and living mostly by her wits. Theirs was a romantic association, but after some years, when no son had appeared and Josephine's looks were far from dewy, Napoleon took another wife, Marie Louise, daugh-

CHILDREN AND TELEVISION

OVER the past 10 years the circulation of the children's department of the Toronto Public Library has increased by 15 per cent. During the same period the school population has increased by 10 per cent.

Two years ago the Vancouver Public Library had enrolled about 67 per cent of the Vancouver elementary school population, with each child borrowing on an average 20 books a year. (Of the adult population of Vancouver, less than 30 per cent were members of the library.)

Since the so-called "TV drop years" of 1950-51, the Los Angeles Public Library, reputedly having the largest circulation department

The first of a series on the subject in the world, has seen a "sky-rocketing spiral" in circulation.

The causes of the increased interest in books across North America range from the growing interest in science and technology (increased but not created by Sputnik) to the transformation of the book industry by the appearance of millions of paperbacks annually.

Television? It's difficult to tell what influence TV played. But one thing is certain: TV did not stop the interest in books. And if that seems a negative approach to the subject of TV and children, it is because in this first article we want to do little more than challenge some popular notions.

Let's take some of them—

Television reduces the amount of time the individual spends reading. In many surveys people acquiring TV report a drop in reading time. How does this square with increases in library circulation and book publishing? There may be several answers.

First, in North America, despite circulation increases, relatively few people belong to libraries. Hence selected samples of individuals may not reflect the increase. Secondly, the novelty effect of television may be an influence. Here, it may very well be that the novelty affect lasts longer—perhaps even permanently—with adults than it does with the young children who have grown up with TV. A recent English survey suggests that TV has not significantly affected either the reading ability or the amount read by children.

This suggests the great difficulty in studying the effects of TV on children. The TV set becomes part of the child's social background, contributing to his general cultural level, for good or bad, and is almost inextricably mixed with the influences of books, radio, films, parents, boy scout organizations, and young Johnny next door. The most frequent verdict in literature on the subject of TV and children is not proven though all authorities agree that in some way it is a very important factor in growth.

It is fairly clear that TV does have an effect on what people read. In general, the tendency is towards non-fiction in reading. Librarians and publishers report a great interest in non-fiction of all types — biography, do-it-yourself projects, history, science and so on. These adult interests are reflected in children's titles. Newspapers and magazines offering information have won much more of an increase in circulation than magazines offering purely escapist fiction. Thus people turn to TV to supply their fantasy needs.

Beside the diffuse effect that TV probably has on reading, there is also a more direct (though less important) effect. Books on a subjects treated on TV will often be asked for in libraries. One librarian has suggested that whereas formerly children got interested in a subject by coming across it in books now they approach books because TV or something else has aroused their interest in a subject.

TV reduces viewers (adults and children) to passive automatons, taking them from more creative and healthy activity. In April and May of this year, nearly 9,000 children wrote the CBC asking for a cut-out offered them on The Friendly Giant. Again, 800 people — adults and young people — wrote in about two high-level educational series on physics and chemistry. Still again, 2,500 viewers of Close-Up, the CBC-TV interview program, wrote asking for a pamphlet which listed summer guests; presumably they wished to arrange their Wednesday evenings suitably. In short, the CBC finds its audiences anything but passive.

Critics do not always clearly define "creative" and "passive." Presumably the charge is accompanied by a mental picture of a child in the allegedly typical viewing attitude; slumped back glazed eye, vacant face. But if we confined creativity to physical movement, our most creative people are all-in wrestlers.

(Many parents report their children do act like all-in wrestlers while watching TV, constantly on the move and tusseling with one another, even though interested in the program.)

The point, surely, is this: knowledge must be absorbed through the senses in an act of concentration. And whether it be screen, book or blackboard the back can be slumped, the face vacant and the eye glazed during concentration. But with book and blackboard our attitude changes from disapproval to approval, and with our attitude, our choice of adjectives changes too: relaxed back, rapt face, intense eye.

An admittedly sketchy survey of officials of half a dozen youth clubs in Vancouver last year suggested that TV at first adversely affected attendance and membership. But this temporary setback has long since been overcome. The Vancouver Boy Scouts, for instance, doubled its membership in seven years.

Oddly enough, the critic most likely to attack TV for engendering passive traits is also likely to attack it for encouraging juvenile delinquency. Yet delinquent behaviour is anything but passive behaviour. But this is another question.

Crime and violence programs on TV harmfully affect the child, even stimulating it to delinquent action. First let's distinguish three types of violence programs:

1. Good - guys - and - bad - guys, clearly distinguished, with virtue always triumphant. Prototype is set in the American West but Sherwood Forest or Mars will do as well. Plot is stereotyped.

2. At the other extreme lie the "adult" crime programs and west-ter of the head of the house of Hapsburg, and the following year she bore him a son. Other campaigns were just as successful, and the Little Corporal, as his troops nicknamed him, was emperor of Europe from the North Sea to Sicily.

But while studying so closely the psychology of his opponents, he forgot that he, too, was a man with limitations, and when his empire crumbled around him he gave way under the burden and his enormous intellectual energy, and threw himself on the generosity of the English, who promptly whipped him off to the island of St. Helena, to live out his days in isolated martyrdom.

If his appendix had ruptured, if he had been kicked by his horse, had been drowned at sea, or ended up in any of a thousand undistinguished ways, there might have been no legend. But fate took pity on the Little Corporal and gave him centre stage for his final scene. His banishment gave him an opportunity to impress himself on posterity as a hero, as Messiah of the Revolution. He began writing his memoirs, building up the picture of the military genius, able politician, great lover, humanitarian and uncrowned Washington that most of the world has accepted as his. "What a romance my life has been!" he wrote. And it was. Anatole France summed him up this way: "Napoleon had himself the illusion which he gave to the people. This was his strength and his weakness, this was his beauty."

Napoleon died of cancer on St. Helena in his 52nd year, and was buried there in a lonely spot shaded by two weeping willows. His gravestone bore the words: "Here lies" and no name. Later his body was removed to the Invalides in Paris. There are many letters and other writings by and about Napoleon to support the varied aspects of this vital, brilliant and very human person, and on Wednesday night some of them will be presented on CBC radio in a broadcast from Montreal. The script is by Richard Pennington, librarian of McGill University and specialist of Napoleon Bonaparte's writings.

Percy Rodriquez will play the role of Napoleon and Philip Neilson is narrator.

PROGRAM NOTES

AUGUST 31

See also page 4 of next week's issue for possible changes in these notes and additional program information.

On Safari

This week—"Fossil Fields of Galdhani." Armand and Michaela Denis visit these famous fossil fields where the bones of animals which lived more than 50,000 years ago are buried. The bones are exposed as the wind blows away the sand. They also visit the museum of natural history in Cape Town, where more fossils are shown.

Mickey Mouse Club

(1) Talent Roundup—Guests Virginia Lee and two Japanese girls do an acrobatic and dance number. (2) Argentinian Adventure film of a large barbecue supper on the great grasslands, followed by a fiesta. (3) Knight for a Day—Pluto fights the villain in a medieval duel and thus saves Minnie Mouse. Jimmie Dodds sings the fable, The Fox and the Grapes.

CBWT—How About That!

This week—"The American Cowboy." Ken Dunstan is host.

Scan

CBC Information Services program. This week host Frank Stalley interviews CBC newscaster Larry Henderson who has just returned from Moscow and two CBC commissioners. From Toronto.

The Millionaire

This week—"Martha Halloran." A woman finds that even a million dollars cannot buy safety for her pilot husband.

Joan Fairfax Show

Guest Wally Koster joins Joan to present song stylings in the modern manner.

Danny Thomas

Comedy series starring Danny Thomas as a New York entertainer. This week Danny meets songstress Dinah Shore.

Cannonball

Canadian film-drama series about a trucker and his family. This week—"Butch." Mike and Jerry use a test radio in their truck to notify young Butch that their lives are being threatened by a stowaway but Butch is not keeping his vigil by the receiver and doesn't hear his dad. Paul erns which are designed for adult viewing and presumably treat crime and violence in a mature way.

3. Somewhere between lie shock programs, treating crime and violence in a sensational way with the criminal virtually the hero, however much the ending pretends otherwise.

Some parents and educators see these distinctions as unreal and all treatment of crime and violence as harmful. Other educators, and perhaps most parents, see no harm in the first type. These westerns may even promote socially desirable traits of honesty and courage; perhaps even act as harmless outlets for aggressive impulses. As for "adult" westerns and crime programs, some see the term as a pure euphemism for "brutal;" others claim that adults (as well as children) have rights, the right to choose, for instance, and that at least after a reasonable hour it is up to parents, not broadcasters, to decide what children should see.

"The Untouchables" (Part two). The second and concluding part of a prohibition agent's true story about the crusade against Al Capone's crime syndicate. Cast: Robert Stack, Neville Brand, Keenan Wynn, Bill Williams, Pat Crowley and Barbara Nichols.

We cannot discuss this fully. But again, there is a slim point of agreement. Some violent programs will harmfully frighten the well-adjusted child and even trigger delinquent behaviour in the maladjusted child. This is most likely to happen in programs showing settings similar to the child's own environment and people with whom he might identify himself and family and friends. It is least likely to happen in clearly make-believe land; for instance, westerns.

Here again, the position soon gets complicated. Some children will shrug off the most violent scenes; others — equally normal — might be frightened by the mild adventures of a bunny, by the close-up of a face, or by the ridiculing of a member of a quiz panel (the last two being quite common causes of fear in young viewers). Again, if we remove all violence and crime from the diet of an older child, we give him a distorted picture and one which in all likelihood he knows to be distorted; hence, boredom with this "kid's stuff."

One psychiatrist quotes examples of mentally sick adults overwhelmed by TV addiction, then says, "Those traits which sick adults now satisfy by television can be presumed to be those traits that children, exposed to TV from childhood (infancy really!) and all through the character-forming years, may expect to develop."

We have ignored elements like the native curiosity of the child and make no attempt to offer proof of this astonishing inference from mentally sick adult to normal child. (Psycho-analysts have long been criticized for transferring abnormal mental processes to normal persons). But the quotation does bring up a more subtle criticism of television:

Television, so the argument runs, even more than most mass media, helps mould the outlook and create the values of growing children. So even though TV may seldom directly stimulate delinquency, it may yet be creating attitudes not consistent with democratic ideals—ridicule of the egg-head, lauding of the strongman, acceptance of brutality, and so on.

But the argument is not against TV as such, it is an argument against bad programs. If TV can lower ideals and appeal to baser instincts, it has exactly the same power to do the opposite. The responsibility of broadcasters to provide sane programs is as great as the responsibility of parents to guide their children's viewing.

On Our CoverRuth Walker

Until three years ago Ruth Walker had no intention of going into show business. Now, the pretty, green-eyed, platinum blonde is a regular vocalist on Swing Easy, seen Saturdays on the CBC-TV network.

In the summer of 1956 Ruth and her husband went to the Laurentians for a vacation. At the lodge she took part in a sing-song which ended as a solo, with Ruth singing and the rest of the vacationers listening.

"You should be in show business," an American television producer told her.

Ruth, who had never taken singing lessons, went home and thought the matter over for a few months. Then she telephoned TV and night-club personality Billy O'Connor.

She auditioned. O'Connor listened, and liked what he heard. He sent her to take singing lessons from band-leader Art Hallman.

Shortly afterwards Ruth took a night-club engagement, which was followed by successful club appearances. Ruth played clubs in Toronto, New York and London, Ontario, and has been booked into Montreal's famous El Morocco three times. She also appeared several times on a television show from Buffalo, New York.

"Then I decided to audition for the CBC," recalls Ruth. The ensuing audition led to guest appearances in 1958 on such CBC productions as Country Club and Here's Duffy.

Now, Ruth is starring on Swing Easy, along with the Rhythm Pals, Alan Millar, and Bill Richards and his orchestra.

Asked about her amazingly rapid rise to stardom, Ruth replies, "I guess I'm just lucky."

Ruth has no time for any hobbies. As she puts it, "What with my marriage and career, I just don't have time for anything else."

Ruth was born and raised in Toronto where she attended Ross Avenue public school and Eastern Commerce high school.

Ruth was married five years ago. Her husband, Allan, works for a publishing company in Toronto. They now reside in Highland Creek, near Toronto.

What does Ruth's husband think about her glamorous new career? "He's just as excited as I am," she says.

Sylvia Murphy On Jack's Show

Sylvia Murphy

Sylvia Murphy, featured vocalist with Jack Kane's orchestra last season on Music Makers '59 will be among the guests on The Show That Jack Built this Tuesday on CBC-TV from Winnipeg.

Born in Montreal, she made her start in entertainment at 16, doing night-club spots in her home town. She moved to Toronto in 1956. Club dates in the Toronto area kept her busy at the start, as did her two youngsters, Debbie, 5½, and Michael, 3.

On March 7, 1956, she made her debut before the TV cameras with a rendition of A Foggy Day in London Town. Things began picking up for her after that, with more club dates and a regular spot on Billy O'Connor's CBC radio show. When Billy got a TV show of his own, his singer moved with him. "Sylvia is going to be one of the best singers to come out of Canadian television," O'Connor once said. And now, some time later, it seems his prediction carried weight. To further prove his theory, Liberty Magazine's national TV poll two years ago voted Sylvia as Canada's best new performer on television.

Since her success on the O'Connor show, Sylvia has brightened the screen-time of such shows as CBC's Hit Parade, Summertime, and Here's Duffy. On January 14 she was interviewed by Joyce Davidson on CBC-TV's Close-Up. Displaying her versatility Sylvia appeared on G.M. Presents drama, Face to Remember, alongside Charles Templeton and Robert Christie on January 18. Sylvia was married to Charles Templeton May 1.

As to stardom, Sylvia has philosophical words on that subject: "I don't consider myself to be anything like a star, in fact, I wouldn't know how to act like one. I don't know just what the public expects of a star."

There's no simple answer to any problem about people. Try to assimilate them and you are accused of steam-rolling their national life out of existence; try to preserve their national life and you are charged with preventing their national development and treating them like something in a museum. There's no simple answer—but there are some things that can be done.—Philip Mason, Director of the Institute of Race Relations in London, summing up talks on "The Boundaries of Race" broadcast in the BBC's General Overseas Service.

PROGRAM NOTES SEPTEMBER 2

See also page 4 of next week's issue for possible changes in these notes and additional program information.

Albert's Place

This week—"Stars" by Kitty Marcuse. Albert's friends teach him about the stars and enact the story of Princess Andromeda being rescued by Perseus from the sea monster.

Rope Around the Sun

Songs and stories of the Old West, with Canada's cowboy troubadour Stu Davis. Today, Stu's story is about his old Indian friend, Big Sam, chief of a Cree band, who used to come to town for the yearly town fair, and about Big Sam's reaction to the "world's strongest woman," who claimed she could lift a horse right off the ground. Production—Jean Mackay; script—Kerry Wood of Red Deer, Alberta. From Winnipeg.

Huckleberry Hound

This week—"Mice Nappers." Fun for children with Huck and his pals.

Walt Disney Presents

This week—"The Slaughter Trail." Lawman John Slaughter, now a cattleman, opens a new trail to beef-hungry Arizona in 1879 by driving his cattle through dangerous Indian country. Tom Tyron portrays John Slaughter.

Live A Borrowed Life

Charles Templeton is moderator as Anna Cameron, Bill Walker, Elwyn Yost and guest panelist try to identify famous characters portrayed by the contestants.

Music Hall

With English comedian Dave King, Vic Shoen's orchestra, the Bill Foster Dancers, and special guests. From New York.

Bat Masterson

Western starring Gene Barry. This week—"Incident at Leadville." Bat

Impostor Ferdinand Demara Describes His Escapades

FOR eight months during the Korean war Ferdinand Waldo Demara, Jr., acted as a surgeon lieutenant in the Royal Canadian Navy off Korea. He served as medical officer on a destroyer and once operated on several South Korean soldiers during an emergency. Back in Canada newspapers carried stories of his heroism and his charity work in a Korean village. That was the cause of his exposure as a complete fake and probably the basis for his biographers claim that he is "the greatest rascal of them all."

Demara is now engaged in what he calls "the greatest caper of them all." Recently he came to an undisclosed city in America and filmed an interview with Pierre Berton. That interview will be seen on Close-Up, Wednesday. Naturally, Demara did not discuss his present activities, but somewhere, arrives in Leadville, Colorado, to tangle with the beautiful and charming editor of the paper, who had branded him as a notorious gunman who must be eliminated.

Close-Up

Part of this special one hour edition of "Close-Up" consists of a filmed interview between Pierre Berton and Ferdinand Waldo Demara Jr., a man who has impersonated Catholic priests, doctors, prison reformers and college officials. He is perhaps most famous for his impersonation of a medical officer aboard a Canadian destroyer during the Korean war. J. Frank Willis is host. (See story this page).

CBWT-Football Huddle

CBC sportscaster Jack Wells and Winnipeg Blue Bomber coach Bud Grant discuss football plays and players. The program also features filmed highlights from the Winnipeg-Edmonton game August 27 and an analysis of the Winnipeg-Saskatchewan game August 29. Tentatively scheduled is a live interview with a member of the British Columbia football team. Frank Rasler, producer.

probably in the United States, a large, cheerful, hard-working man is not what he seems to be.

In the interview, Demara tried to explain to Berton why he has impersonated, often with extraordinary success, Catholic priests, doctors, prison reformers and college officials. But he can give no reasonable account. Sometimes he calls himself a saint, sometimes a "completely rotten man." On one occasion he did admit cheerfully that what drives him is "pure rascality." His biographer, Robert Crichton, who has compiled the only lengthy account of his many activities, believes Demara is the greatest rascal of the present century.

If his motives are hazy, his methods are not. Demara once said of himself, "I am a superior sort of liar. I don't tell any truth at all, so that my story has a unity of parts, a structural integrity, and that way sounds much more like truth than truth itself."

Demara bases his hoaxes on certain definite philosophies. For instance, he believes that in any big organization there are great chunks of unattached power lying around. The expert hoaxer moves in and picks up that power; he never tries to wrest power from those who already have it.

Demara's borrowed lives are often useful. He leaves friends behind him but almost never returns to the scenes of his escapades.

A Texas prison official announced that he would be proud to re-hire Demara if he had the proper credentials. Demara has revamped the prison's maximum security system and laid the groundwork for revised penal laws in the state's prison system.

A delegation of citizens from Maine Island, where Demara was the only "schoolteacher," visited his trial and asked that charges against him be dropped and that he return to the island. The charges were dropped, but Demara did not go back.

Years ago Demara remarked to a surprised policeman who took him into custody: "We imposters, sir, are an unaccountable people."

On Close-Up Demara will speak on behalf of Frater Mary Jerome, a Trappist novice; Brother Robert Copernicus, of the Pious Society of St. Mark; Robert Linton French, Dean of the School of Philosophy, Cannon University; Brother John Payne, a teacher; C. B. Hamman, a student; Dr. Joseph, once of the Royal Canadian Navy, and probably many others.

Demara is a many sided person.

Movie Review

"South Pacific"

JOHN HIRSCH, Winnipeg theatre director, talks about the film version of Rodgers and Hammerstein hit

(Originally broadcast on CBW's "Passing Show")

There is no doubt about it, Rodgers and Hammerstein's musical comedy . . . South Pacific is one of the best theatre pieces that ever came out of the workshop of the masters. It has some really beautiful songs and several others which in a run of the mill musical would be considered excellent. The show has a story which manages to rise above the usual inane plots of most musicals and yet never gets too serious or preachy to break the never, never land feeling which somehow is a must for a successful musical.

Now that it has been transferred to the wide screen and amplified to an almost frightening degree by stereophonic sound . . . I am not too happy to report that something got lost in the operation. The songs are still there, every one of them. Some of them are sung by the actors and some of them are only mouthed by the performer while a singer's voice . . . dubbed in . . . is what you hear. If you've ever heard Juanita Hall sing Bali ordinary fellow working as a train conductor for the Union Pacific Railroad, but to me he is the most extraordinary person in the whole world.

"For eight years Bill sent money and clothing to Ronnie's family. Then through his sponsorship Ronnie was able to begin a new life in America in 1952, and take up his studies where he had left off in the sixth grade ten years before. Ronnie is studying to become an electrical engineer and has two more years in college before he graduates. Bill was able to give Ronnie formal lessons when they were together in the sweltering sands of Iran, and also when Ronnie enrolled in a high school in Utah, at the age of 22. Their friendship is the most beautiful manifestation of the David and Jonathan story I have ever seen.

"Five years after we were married our son, Mark William, was born. He is an adorable, round, brown bundle with eyes like Tokay grapes, a wide, generous smile, and a wider, more generous nose! When we took him home to visit my people in New Zealand last winter they fell in love with him on sight because he is all Maori. We coined a new word and call him our A-maori-can. My people honoured him with two Maori names: Rererangi (because we flew home and the word means to cleave the air), and Ngatihou, which is my sun-tribe. He was christened with these two names in the Church of England built by his great-great grandfather. The christening ceremony was performed in native tongue by the Archdeacon, the Rev. Paki Tipene, and it was one of the most beautiful I have ever attended. Bill is an amateur photographer and has a priceless collection of colored pictures of my people and my country. Because of his love of people he was able to win the absolute confidence of the Maoris, many of whom had never before permitted their pictures to be taken. The old Maori lady with the tattooed lips is almost a thing of the past in New Zealand now, but Bill was able to photograph several of them.

"Here in Bountiful we collect people from all over the world and from every walk of life. We feel that by sharing our home with them we are enriched by their fellowship, we benefit from cultural exchanges, and cement a 'family oneness' around the world."

Hai, I am sure you'll be as disappointed as I was when the voice didn't match her wonderful face... which is... thank God... in the movie.

But it is bothersome to detect these things when you want to be drawn into the story and are willing to believe. Mitzi Gaynor plays Nellie Forbush, the girl from Little Rock, Arkansas, who falls in love with a middle aged French planter. However, she cannot completely give up some good home-grown prejudices which tell her that she oughtn't marry a man who was once married to a coloured woman and had children by her. Miss Gaynor is no Mary Martin, who made the part immortal in the annals of American theatre... as they say in theatre magazines... and I wouldn't hold it against her if not for the feeling all the way through the film, that Mr. Logan who directed Miss Gaynor must have tried awfully hard to get a good imitation of Mary Martin from the talented, but not that talented Miss Gaynor.

Rossano Brazzi plays the French settler, who ran away from a world which he found to be full of hate, and does a very good and properly passionate job. Sometimes one wonders why a man who reads Proust and Anatole France falls for the corn and blueberry charm of the healthy milk-fed Nellie... but as I said before... this musical comedy on film manages to sail wisely between the rocks of reality and illusion and besides... anything, but anything can happen on a South Pacific island. Anyone who has ever heard of Gauguin knows that.

John Kerr makes a very nice and sensitive Lt. Cable who takes a pleasure trip to Bali Hai and loses his heart to Bloody Mary's daughter who... in the film emerges as a beautiful character... what I really mean is that she is absolutely beautiful and to see her is worth the price of admission alone. Luther Billis, the crazy sea-bee, is played by Ray Walston, an extremely comical gent whose stomach muscles are a wonder to behold when they are put to work. If you remember, Billis does a belly dance in a straw wig at a Thanksgiving concert.

The film is photographed in some new process or just the lenses are new... I am not sure which. It is as colourful as the best postcards you can buy on Tahiti... I am sure. But I am not so sure that all the scenery and a mad succession of Wagnerian sunsets and seascapes do help the show. It is just a bit too dramatic. And every time someone sings a song they all turn yellow or green or just plain lead colour. I used to think that writers of musical comedies spent the last ten years figuring out how not to draw attention to the "I feel a song coming on" sort of business and then in this film you are blinded every time someone starts to vocalize. On the whole it was a pleasure to hear the songs again... even if they did blare a bit too much. The romantic Bali Hai is still very attractive... the characters still fairly believable.

The Insistent Advertiser

• Advertising we have come to accept as a necessary evil, distasteful though it is; something could be done to improve it. Surely the advertisers don't have to harp the same line, week after week, month after month, till I vow never to buy that article if it's the last thing I do. However, short humorous ditties . . . where the advertiser does not expect you to take them too seriously, but they get the point across humorously. (are all right). Not so the deadly serious ads when the stern-faced individual with a hard raucous voice comes on. Him I could choke.

Sunday . . . seems to have been completely taken over by commercialism. Surely a good sermon and an hour's hymn singing is not too much to expect. This country will soon be engulfed by heathenism.

Too many actors and TV commentators don't seem to know what to do with their hands, so they try to be nonchalant by lighting a cigarette and blowing smoke in the face of the viewer—ignorant and bad manners, to say the least. Also if they sit down for a minute they have to pull out a bottle of whiskey. Both actions imply that actors are paid to do so by to-

Two for Physics

• Many thanks for your program Two for Physics. It is one of the finest presentation that I have had the pleasure of seeing on TV. I only wish I were learning my physics all over again under the guidance of those inimitable instructors, Drs. Hume and Ivey. Please continue this kind of work.—J. G. J. Camp Shilo, Manitoba.

• When the first program appeared I thought "Oh no, not another dull talking program!" Then almost against my will I found myself becoming increasingly interested, till now I wouldn't miss the program! I only hope it also catches the younger generation in its spell and leads them to make their careers in the physics field, for it has made me wish I was much younger, with the opportunity to try. The two professors who present the program make it truly thought-provoking, and they are to be congratulated on their excellent work. I feel that it is programs such as Two for Physics and Astronomy Today that make CBC-TV the best in its field. Congratulations!—(Miss) Y. K., Westwin, Manitoba.

Westerns and Alcohol

• First I would like to express my appreciation of some excellent programs that are shown on television. I have wondered, and find that many of my friends are of the same opinion, just why it is necessary to show so many western pictures and so many films in which there are scenes of drinking. I am not a teetotaler and could possibly consume any given share but I am certainly opposed to so many films in which drinking scenes are shown because I believe that these scenes have a bad influence on the youth of this country . . . I do think that if the CBC is paying any portion of the costs of exhibiting these films they should have some jurisdiction to censor the films and eliminate so many drinking scenes. J. A. D., Neepawa, Manitoba.

Who Knows?

• The time is 9:45 p.m., Friday, July 3, 1959, and the CBC television program is composed of four learned gentlemen in a program called Who Knows? Well, my wife and I are in our middle sixties and we were sitting down expecting a decent, enjoyable program. Instead we heard some learned discussion on archeology with pictures of some gruesome objects.

Maybe some 5% of the people of Canada might like the program. I feel sure that 95% of Canadians find it boring. Why inflict it on the Canadian public?—J. N., Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan.

• I am certainly not very well versed when it comes to archeology but I have always been fascinated by it. Your program Who Knows? has prompted me to "dig up" quite a few books on the subject which I had forgotten I possessed and be assured that any object I come across from now on that has the slightest hint of antiquity will be thoroughly examined and identified as quickly as possible. Many more Who Knows? programs.—L. B., Sturgeon Falls, Ontario.

Close-Up

• The performance by Pierre Berton in his visits to the U.S.S.R. and Egypt does not measure up to the high standard of Close-Up. He interviews poorly because when he asks questions he uses such words as "presumes" and "gathers." His expressions are dubious: "beautiful Suez." He seems to have placed the cameras badly for the closing scene in the U.S.S.R. and the opening scene in Egypt. Nor does he tie in camera and dialogue very well, as when he says about the Nile "a lovely river, isn't it?" and all the viewer is allowed to see is an indistinct shot of a man in a boat. Tourism shows all through the U.S.S.R. visit and comes out in the Egypt visit in such shots as the long dance sequence in the night club. Political immaturity underlies both visits and shows strikingly in the bad taste in making so much of the fellow going up Cheops pyramid (I wonder if Berton can understand why that sequence was inexcusable?) and in asking the question what would happen if Nasser was "shot in the back?" He's a nice man but, if you can, try to keep him out of one of the finest programs in the history of the CBC. He might ruin it.—R. P., Calgary.

Dave King Show

• Thanks for "The Dave King Show." It's the best thing on television nowadays. Here's hoping the powers that be keep him on TV for a very long time.—Mrs. S. S., Olds, Alberta.

Long Shot

• "Long Shot" is the most annoying broadcast I have ever seen. It is neither clever nor funny, just pointless. For heaven's sake, get the thing off the air.—P. H. G., Stettler, Alberta.

Monday on "Summer Fallow"

Tidal Wave

On November 18, 1929, the most severe earth tremor ever felt from Rhode Island to Newfoundland toppled chimneys and swayed buildings for two minutes. No tragedies were reported, and it was thought that damage was only incidental. Then, three days later, the wireless of the little coastal steamer Portia flashed out the news to St. John's that the quake had brought terror and destruction to part of Newfoundland.

Burin, Nov. 21, 1921. Burin experienced very severe earth tremors 5:05 p.m. 18th. Followed by an immense 50-foot tidal wave which swept away everything along the waterfront. Sixteen dwelling houses with nine lives, mostly women and children. Four bodies recovered. All connections by wire cut off. Report is that 18 lives have been lost, Lourdes Cove and Lemoine. S.S. Daisy rendering every assistance. St. Lawrence also swept. No lives lost. Destruction of property terrible and many people left destitute and homeless. Doing all possible to relieve suffering. Daisy now at Lemoine. Writing particulars. Signed: Magistrate Hollett.

Ten of the 21 cables connecting the eastern and western hemispheres were severed. Tides eight feet higher than normal were reported along the Atlantic coast. But it was Burin Peninsula that took the brunt of the crashing wall of water that snarled in unexpectedly and gobbled up the homes and livelihood of a 30-mile stretch of fishing coast. (The Peninsula is a stocking-shaped neck of land on the south shore of Newfoundland, about 80-miles-long, and from 10 to 20-miles-wide.)

A northwest hurricane had hurried the fishermen ashore.

Shortly afterwards an earth tremor had been felt and discussed, and the fisherfolk were just settling down for an early supper when the aftermath of the quake thundered in, fifty feet high and travelling fast. Homes, stores, fishing stands, boats and the winter's provisions were swept off the rocky shore and chewed to bits by the growling sea. Cries for help mingled with the roar of tumbling buildings and rush of water. Afterwards there

Anna Karenina

Tolstoy's masterpiece, Anna Karenina, was suggested to him by the suicide of a woman who lived on an estate near his own, and who took her life in the same way as his tragic heroine.

H. Oldfield Box has adapted the story for a 12-part BBC serial, which begins on CBC Dominion Sunday night. There are two plots running through the novel, the main one concerning Anna who, married without love to a dry, unromantic man twenty years her senior, becomes infatuated with Vronsky, who is everything her husband is not . . . handsome, charming, courageous, debonair; and the secondary story of Levin, landowner and farmer like Tolstoy himself and, also like Tolstoy, tormented by self-doubt. The connection between the two stories is slight, and yet, says H. Oldfield Box, "in the fabric of the book they blend perfectly. The second, however indirectly, is a finely contrived commentary on the first." Mary Wimbush will be heard as Anna.

MUSIC ON RADIO

by FRANK HAWORTH of Toronto

Musical offerings this week emphasize the conservative aspects of things, ranging as they do from old English song (in the Sunday Morning Recital) to an early violin sonata by Szymanowski, a "modern" touch being supplied by Malcolm Arnold's Concerto for Organ, Trumpets, Tympani and Strings. Conservative, however, does not mean dull, for the items include a Cantata by J. S. Bach, an early example of the symphony from the pen of his son Johann Christian Bach, and a symphony by a little-known Austrian composer, Ignaz Holzbauer. None of these works can be truthfully described as hackneyed.

The Bach Cantata, Vergnugte Ruh (numbered 170) for contralto, organ and orchestra, figures on the same program as the Arnold work, that of the concert of the Canadian College of Organists, in CBC Wednesday Night, and is one of a prodigious number of such compositions that Bach produced—including no fewer than five complete sets, for each occasion of the church's year (of which only some 200 have survived). These works, which were performed before the sermon in the marathon services of those days, range in duration from 10 to 35 minutes, and vary much in their demands in the way of personnel, although all use an orchestra. Developed from the anthem or motet, they are sectional works, embodying recitatives and arias, instrumental interludes, and (usually) concerted vocal numbers—the "chorale" being a characteristic feature, though not an invariable one. Perhaps only those who have some experience of writing out music—even if only copying it—can appreciate the sustained effort involved in such an achievement, on

SUMMER STAGE

This week—“Catch My Death” by Mavor Moore. A comedy about how two old codgers go about building their respective friendships. Cast: Drew Thompson as the story-teller, Alexander Webster as Hamish Logan

Sunday on CBC Radio

“Catch My Death”

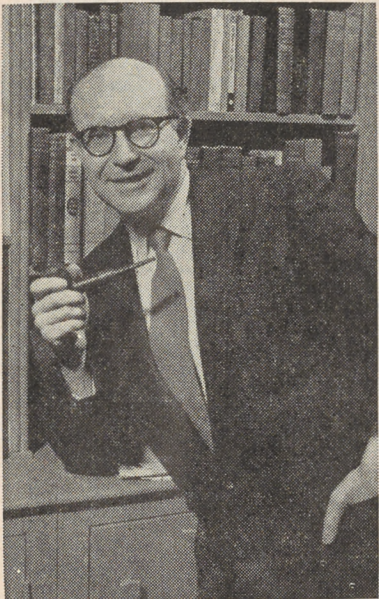

An original comedy by Mavor Moore

THERE'S an old saying that you never know who your friends are until you leave them. And it was this that led to an experiment that caused quite a scandal some time ago and would have convinced anyone but a skeptic. It began in a discussion between two old friends deep in leather chairs at their club . . . Hamish Logan and Brian O'Connor, who had both emigrated to Canada in their youth, with few shillings to rub together. Now Hamish was an investment broker, which Brian described as “a mug's game, but you can make your pile at it.” Brian was a chemical engineer. Said Hamish: “If you can put up with the stinks, sure it's as good a life as another.” Now at 75 both were millionaires, Hamish with a weak heart, Brian with asthma. And they had begun to total their assets.

“The fact is,” said Hamish, “we both agree the only real riches is friendship.” “Yes,” said Brian, “but don't expect gratitude, which is what you're after. The friends who owe you something will be as happy as larks to see you go, so's the debt will be liquidated. The ones who'll miss you are the ones who owe you nothing in the first place: they'll miss the reminder you gave them while you were alive of what fine paid-up fellows they are.” “That's cynical rubbish,” declared Hamish.

Eastward by Cargo Boat. For the past two weeks, Harriet Hill has been describing events of a trip by freighter that she and her husband took earlier this summer. Today, Mrs. Hill concludes her series. She is a columnist with the Montreal Gazette.

Alcoholism. To conclude her series on alcoholism, the CBC's morning commentator in Windsor, Nancy Battagello, interviews the wives of two former alcoholics. The wives comment that anyone who lives with an alcoholic over a period of time needs help almost as much as the alcoholic does. They discuss the work of Al-

Anon, a family group for people whose own lives start to fall apart because they've lived with an alcoholic, and they talk about the effect of alcoholism on children in a household.

Daily Features . . . Today's news commentary is by Margaret Prang of Vancouver. Francean Campbell plays some of her favourite records, and excerpts are read from "Northwest of 16" by J. G. MacGregor, adapted for radio by Sally Creighton.

the mechanical side only. Inevitably in so vast an output, there are variations in the quality of the inspiration, if not in the technical excellence; but at their best, they are monuments of human accomplishment.

The symphony by Johann Christian Bach, to be played in the Little Symphonies program on Monday, reminds us that Johann Sebastian by no means exhausted all the supply of genius in the Bach family. Eleventh son of his illustrious father, Johann Christian was known as the English Bach, from his long residence in London. Like his no less celebrated brothers, he developed the then-new forms of sonata and symphony, of which he may be regarded as one of the founders. His attitude to the art differed somewhat from that of his father, as is illustrated by the remark of the historian Burney, that his harpsichord music is "such as ladies can execute with little trouble." Nevertheless, no less an authority than Mozart revered him, and the best of his music is fine by any standards.

Szymanowski, whose early sonata for violin and piano is to be played by Arthur Polson (violin) and Harold Brown in CBC Concert Hall on Friday, is a somewhat mysterious figure of the recent past (he died in 1937). Connoisseurs sing his praises, and his Polish compatriots regard him as the greatest composer their nation has produced since Chopin (to whose work he himself was devoted). But his music is rarely heard. He began as a traditionalist, in the manner of the later 19th century — he was influenced by Strauss and Scriabin, as well as by Chopin; but as his career progressed he was further influenced by oriental, and later by folk music; while towards the end of his life he experimented with "modern" techniques like polytonality and atonality. An enterprising gentlemen altogether, it would appear, and worth an occasional hearing.

TRANS-CANADA MATINEE

Lugga-Lugga. David Brock is a Vancouver freelance writer and broadcaster sometimes given to reminiscing about his "long-ago" (according to him) childhood. Today, he recalls some of the sounds of that childhood—a saxophone in the night, a dog snoring on a Polar Bear rug, the dinner bell, the air-compressor on the streetcar's brakes, and many others.

Perfect Blending. When Marlene Hunter was a working wife, she and her husband bought an electric blender. Just the thing to cut down on the time it takes to cook the evening meal, they reasoned. Reason was slowly abandoned, though, after a lengthy diet of liquid vegetables. Mrs. Hunter is now a stay-at-home wife; she blends her freelance broadcasts on a typewriter.

Women of Science. Dr. Helen Sawyer Hogg is a noted Canadian astronomer and teacher at the University of Toronto. Today, to conclude her eight-week series about women scientists, Toronto's Mattie Rotenberg interviews Dr. Hogg.

Daily Features . . . Today's news commentary is by Peter Inglis of Vancouver. Francean Campbell plays some of her favourite records, and excerpts are read from "Northwest of 16" by J. G. MacGregor, adapted for radio by Sally Creighton.

CBW-3:33 p.m. CBK-3:33 p.m. CBX-2:33 p.m.

POST-NEWS TALK

"The Face of the Maritimes" by Michael Hago-Brunt. (conclusion of Monday's Post-News Talk.)

JOYCE SULLIVAN
is the guest vocalist this Tuesday on "The Tommy Hunter Show." (CBW-12:15 p.m., CBK-11:15 a.m., CBX-10:15 a.m.).

"I've a deal more friends than you have."

"You can't prove it one way or another," Brian taunted him. And then Hamish took the step that put the town on its ears. "I'm prepared to bet I have more friends at my funeral than you do!" "Winner take all" said Brian . . . and the bet was on, a whole five hundred thousand dollars worth. "They needn't be our real funerals," Brian insisted. "We'd stage them. Pretend to go, and then wait and see. We'd leave nothing to chance. Same day, same time . . . exactly . . . but at different places, so people would be forced to choose. Then we'd know for sure. After it's all over the winner'll stand the loser to a long holiday in Bermuda, till the thing blows over. Then we'll both come back and live among the true friends thereby discovered."

And so it was decided. But to go along with a stunt like that they needed a doctor to certify them, and an undertaker who'd undertake to bury two empty caskets. Then Brian reminded Hamish that he had two such friends of long outstanding liabilities. And before these two souls knew what had hit them, they were involved in one of the strangest gambles ever known, while the Hippocratic Oath and honor of the mortician fraternity wobbled uncertainly. Once the ground rules were laid down, Hamish and O'Connor adhered to them scrupulously, but within those limits no holds were barred. Each intended to drum up all the friends he could, on both sides of the Atlantic. Each pledged the Rotary Club to turn up en masse for the final rites, and the president nearly had a nervous breakdown trying to figure out how to be in two places at once. The Mendelssohn Choir, the symphony orchestra, distant relatives long neglected . . . the list grew and grew. And how it all worked out will provide some highly amusing radio fare on Sunday night, when Producer's Choice presents Mavor Moore's original comedy, Catch My Death, guest directed by Moore. Drew Thompson will be heard as the story-teller, Alexander Webster as Hamish Logan, and Hugh Webster as Brian O'Connor.

"The fun of the play," says Moore, "is in the way the two old codgers go about building their respective friendships, and I've used this period to satirize several aspects of modern society." Moore is host of the Saturday night radio series Four's Company. Since January he has been drama columnist for the Toronto Telegram, a job that has taken him to England, Scotland, Ireland, France, Spain, Bermuda, New York, Montreal and Stratford. This fall he will be staging The Love for Three Oranges at the Toronto Opera Festival.

THE JOURNALS AND LETTERS OF NAPOLEON

Script by Richard Pennington, librarian of McGill University and specialist on Napoleon Bonaparte's writings. The story begins with Napoleon in his St. Helena exile and presents samples of his writings through a series of flash backs. The reflections are taken from the Emperor's private and official correspondence, his edicts and stirring addresses to the troops, and from his memoirs especially. Mr. Pennington notes that Napoleon "was one of the great memoir writers of history." He passed much of his exile in reliving his former active life and his memoirs are detailed and well-written. Through his writing, the man himself is revealed; his enormous common sense, his knowledge of the human heart, his humour, lack of rancour and his love of literature and the arts. Above all, he reveals his passion for reform and a good society.

were thrilling tales of last-minute rescues from moving houses, of lightning searches made in floating buildings, of a motorist's race to cross a bridge before the surging water reached it, and of his safe crossing a second before the bridge collapsed.

Eight houses were lifted from their foundations and carried to sea with the speed of fast motor boats. At Corbin a family was sitting down to tea when their house was suddenly lifted high and washed into the bay. It returned to land and then to sea again. The third time it came back to land the father smashed a door open and, taking a child in each arm and his wife on his back, jumped to safety. His house disappeared beyond the waves. The Honourable George Bartlett, a prominent Burin merchant, was aboard the S.S. Daisy when the giant wave crashed. He dashed up on deck and saw the land disappearing under the rush of water. "The place is sinking!" he cried. And that was just what it looked like . . . the village seemed to sink into the sea, drowning in the water that had meant life to it for decades. The sea cut a hole five feet deep and ten feet wide through a solid wall of bluestone, and created a harbour where there hadn't been one. A large store was swept inland a quarter of a mile without damage to its stock. Seconds after the crew of a little coastal steamer had been looking up at the shore cliffs, they found themselves lifted high on the crest of the wave, looking down on the tops of the cliffs, and a moment later they were helplessly aground. A home forty feet above sea level filled with water up to three feet on its first floor. The startled owner waded outside and saw the harbour filled with houses and wreckage. Damage was estimated at over a million dollars, and 27 lives were lost. Recently freelance writer-broadcaster Anthony Greene Ayre of St. John's visited the scene of the Burin tragedy and talked to some of the Newfoundland fishermen who survived the tidal wave. Their stories and his impressions will be heard on Summer Fallow Monday night on CBC radio.

TRANS-CANADA MATINEE

A Model Life. What woman hasn't dreamed of being a model? Kay Alsop was among those who did and decided to do something about it. How she became a model, and what happened afterward, is related in this Matinee talk. When she isn't modeling, Mrs. Alsop is a housewife and freelance broadcaster.

Maori Love Story. Today, Mrs. Tribble tells of her journey to the United States and her marriage; talks about the people she has come to know and about her life in a new country. She also talks about her baby son, Mark William, and about her husband's adopted son, Ronnie, and about a trip home to visit her people in New Zealand.

Consumer Broadcast. Farm Women in Ontario are currently being asked about their interest, their problems, and their families. A survey, directed by Dr. Helen Abell, supervisor of the rural sociology unit of the economics division of the Canadian department of agriculture, is being done in every Ontario county. In each county, a member of the Women's Institute and her nearest non-member neighbour are being asked the same questions; questions designed to obtain a broader picture of the needs and interests of farm women and their families. Ruth Harding of the home economics service of the Ontario department of agriculture reports on the survey which is being done by her department in co-operation with the Canadian department of agriculture and the Farm Economics and Statistics branch of the Ontario agriculture department.

Daily Features . . . Today's news commentary is by Peter Inglis of Vancouver. Francene Campbell plays some of her favourite records, and excerpts are read from "Northwest of 16" by J. G. MacGregor, adapted for radio by Sally Creighton.

Radio Forecast

Farm Forum

At the Farm Forum Conference this summer it was decided to take the theme Adjustment - Key to Farming's Future for this year's Farm Forum Broadcasts. These start on November 2 on CBC radio.

"The greater capital needed to run a farm efficiently, the greater efficiency of farming, the resulting trend to larger units - these and many other factors make major adjustments necessary," says Frank Nicholson, production supervisor of radio farms and fisheries broadcasts for the CBC. "The first program - on November 2 - will originate from the convention of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture in Toronto. It will be a 90-minute show."

These broadcasts are a joint effort by the CBC and the National Farm Radio Forum. The Forum has study groups of farmers and other interested people across the country, in villages and lonely farms, who listen to each broadcast, then proceed to have their own follow-up discussions.

The following is a list of this year's topics for discussion:

November 2: The Small Farm—A Special Case—What policies and programs are needed to deal with the small farm problem?

November 9: Regional Broadcast.

November 16: Where is the Market Place?—How are prices set? Who sets them?

November 22: Discussion reports.

November 30: The Farmer in the Market Place. — What are farmers doing, what can they do, and what should they do to influence the price of their products?

December 7: Social Security on the Farm.—Would unemployment insurance and pension plans ensure more stability in farming? How could they be put into effect?

December 14: Market Expansion—a Practical Possibility?—What can we do to expand export markets for our products?

December 21: Discussion reports.

January 4: The Problem of Adjustment—Numbers of Farms—Who should leave? Who should stay? Who should decide?

January 11: The Problem of Adjustment—Price Supports—Are they hindering or helping adjustment?

January 18: The Problem of Adjustment—Credit—The farmers' dilemma and how to ease it.

January 25: Discussion reports.

February 1: Farmer Advertising—Is advertising by farmers necessary to promote the sale of their products?

February 8: Regional broadcast.

February 15: Price Spreads Commission Findings—What can be done to lower costs of food handling and processing?

February 22: Discussion report.

February 29: Education—A Job for Farmers' Organizations—Are the organizations of farmers themselves neglecting the need for constant programs of adult education?

March 7: Farming—A Dangerous Occupation—What can be done by communities and organizations to lower the farm accident rate?

March 14: Farm Organization—a College Course—Should farm organizations' objectives, policies and program be part of the college curriculum?

March 21: The Consumer and the Farmer—Are consumers aware that surpluses are necessary to maintain adequate food supplies?

March 28: Discussion report.

CBC Radio Planning New Classical Talent Series

New Opportunity for Student Singers and Instrumentalists

Only exceptionally talented artists should apply for auditions for a new Trans-Canada Talent Show (Classical) which the CBC is planning for early November on the national radio network.

Producers emphasize that artists who are not of solo calibre—instrumentalists, for example, who are not familiar with opera, oratoria, or similar compositions — should await further training or experience before seeking auditions of this sort.

Terrence Gibbs of Toronto, assistant to the CBC's Director of Music, Geoffrey Waddington, will be in Winnipeg September 1-4 to conduct auditions. Waddington himself will conduct auditions in the East.

Sir Ernest MacMillan, dean of Canadian conductors, will conduct the new series, according to present plans.

ducted by Ivan Romanoff. From Toronto.

CBW-11:00 p.m. CBK-9:00 p.m. CBX-8:00 p.m.

CBC CONCERT HALL

Violinist Arthur Polson and accompanist Harold Brown. From Toronto.

Sonata for Violin and Piano in D minor, Opus 9 Szymanowski
CBW-9:30 p.m. CBK-10:30 p.m. CBX-9:30 p.m.

Two prizes will be awarded at the end of the series, one to the best instrumentalist, one to the best singer. No awards will be given during the series.

The series is planned for a 26-weeks' run, ending approximately in April 1960.

Candidates must be residents of Canada, and must not have established themselves as professional artists in this country, or soloists on the national network.

Prizes consist of $1,000 for each winning candidate and an appearance with the CBC Symphony Orchestra.

The broadcasts are expected to take place before an invited studio audience.
